And roared with all his might,

As though she had a fortune found,
The good wife danced the floor:
"Good man!" she cried, "you spake the word

WINE AND OTHER WISE.

Of all the summer clothing, the straw hat as usual stands at the head.

—No woman with proper appreciation of her rights will marry a man so tall that she cannot pull his hair.

Miss Fannel says that her minister's sermons are "a little too obscure." "But," says she, "I do love to sit and watch the changes of his face!"

Joan of Arc successfully led an army to victory. But did she ever go to a picnic and not scream murder when a little grasshopper jumped down her neck? History is silent on this point.

—Business man: "You vagabond! You send word in that you will see me on business, and when I ask what your business is—you beg!" Vagabond: "But you forget, sir, begging is my business."

—A Tennessee suitor wrote to his sweetheart as follows:—"Your father kicked me last night, and forbid me the house. If I whipped him, would it lessen your love for me?" She replied that it wouldn't and the parent was soundly thrashed.

—A Kansas City reporter records the fact that the defeated candidate "took his way to the train, wrapped in gloom and store clothes. The gloom was an elegant fit, but the store clothes were too short in the legs and very baggy about the shoulders."

An Irishman's Diversion.—"Is your master at home?" "No, your honor." "Why, I saw him go in five minutes ago." "Faix, your honor, he's not exactly at home, he's only in the back-yard, a shooting rats with cannon for his diversion."

"Probably few persons," says the London Truth, "have had so many proposals of marriage as Lady Burdette Coutts. I was talking a day or two ago with an eminent widower. 'I, myself,' he said, 'have proposed to her, for I regard this as a duty that every man owes to his family.'"

Beloved but unresponsive fair one: "So glad to see you, cousin Charles, and so kind of you to drop in! Now you'll sit a couple of hours with grandmamma, won't you, just to amuse her, while Arthur and I take a stroll in the garden? And be careful to speak as loud as you can, for she is very, very deaf, poor dear!"

—A beadle of the old class was pulling the bell to gather in the hearers of a Sunday. So furiously was he at work that snap went the support of the ponderous bell, and down it came with a loud crash through the ceiling, landing at the beadle's feet, who had adroitly jumped aside just in time to escape. A pious elder, standing not far off, told Sandy he ought to be very thankful to Providence for this miraculous saving of his life. "Thankful to Providence!" he cried—"I hae mair need to be thankfu' tae my ain legs, I think. What had Providence tae dae wi't?"

—Before the Ball:—"My son, do not forget above all to be very attentive to Mademoiselle X., whom at the last ball you scarcely noticed. You are to be a lawyer, and you [illegible]

Twisted Beneficial Quacks.

We have heard of people curing others of using strong drink by putting an emetic into their whisky bottle. The following story, told in Harper's Drawer, illustrates the wedding manners of seventy years ago, and the simplicity of a green young Benedict.

A minister of Newburyport was once called up, after he had gone to bed, to marry a couple. The hour was late, and the minister's wife did not rise to witness the ceremony, but gave her husband particular directions for the entertainment of the wedding guests.

"Don't forget to pass the cake and wine, doctor," said she. "The cake is in the corner cupboard, and you will find the wine on the third right-hand shelf in the sideboard."

The doctor promised obedience, put on his clothes, and went down to perform the ceremony. Returning a half hour later, he found his wife sitting up in bed, with an anxious expression on her face. "Doctor," she cried, "did you give them any wine?"

"Certainly, my dear; just as you told me."

"Not from the decanter on the third shelf of the sideboard?"

"That is exactly where you directed me to find it, wife."

"Dear! dear! Did they drink much of it?"

"Why, yes? They emptied their glasses."

"What shall we do! Doctor, I made a mistake—it was ipecac wine you gave them. Oh, how sick they must be! Do, dear, put on your cloak and go right after them; they can't have got far."

The doctor found the bridal party at the corner of the next street. "What made you drink the wine?" he asked. "Couldn't you tell by the taste that there was something wrong about it?"

The bridegroom answered, between his qualms, "She whispered to me that it tasted dreadful queer, but I told her 'twas because he was getting married."

Danger in the Household.

Some fashionable socks and stockings often contain poisonous coloring matter, and cause eruptions of the feet. Some California miners died from the effects of wearing boots lined with bright green flannel, the color in this case being "Scheele's green," a well-known arsenical compound. A tradesman suffered from wearing a bright maroon flannel shirt. Paper collars glazed and stiffened with sized white lead, and containing arsenic, have produced serious illness; and the same results have followed the wearing of hats lined with material containing arsenic, and from gloves and coat-sleeves similarly treated. Five or six persons in a household were rendered suddenly ill by the matter exhaled from chintz window curtains and bed drapery, and green blinds sometimes throw off arsenical particles. Green gas-shades in a composing-room of a printing office have produced illness among the compositors. In the kitchen, arsenic has now and then been met with when used to impart a green hue to dishes, such as blanc mange. In one case a gentleman was poisoned by partaking of a dish innocently enough colored by arsenic preparations which had been mistaken by the cook for an extract of spinach. And even in the exercise of the perfumer's art it behooves us to be on our guard against using preparations for the hair colored green by some compound of this substance. Arsenic also enters into the coloring of certain kinds of wall papers, and, as it readily becomes volatile, we are constantly in danger from its effects.

[illegible]

[illegible] clothing, than by almost any other distinct [illegible] that will derange the nervous system of a person [illegible] No two persons [illegible] should naturally sleep [illegible]. One will thrive, the other will [illegible]. This is the law, and in married life is visited almost universally.

BEDS AND BED-ROOMS.

—The best kind of bed, taking everything into consideration, is one of two kinds. A fairly soft feather bed laid upon a soft horsehair mattress, or a thin mattress laid upon one of the elastic steel-spring beds which have lately been so ingeniously constructed of small connected springs that yield in a wave-like manner to every motion. It is against my inclination to try to write out the time-honored old feather bed and mattress, but I am forced to state that the new steel-spring bed is, of necessity, the bed of the future. It fulfils every intention of flexibility; it is durable; it goes with the bedstead, as an actual part of it, and it can never be a nest or receptacle of contagion or impurity.

On the subject of bed-clothes the points that have most to be enforced are that heavy bed-clothing is always a mistake, and that weight in no true sense means warmth. The light down quilts or coverlets which are now coming into general use are the greatest improvement that have been made in our time in regard to bed-clothes. One of these quilts takes well the place of two blankets, and they cause much less fatigue from weight than layer upon layer of blanket covering.

As to the actual quantity of clothes which should be on the sleeper I can lay down no rule of numbers or quantities, because different people require such different amounts. I can, nevertheless, offer one very good practice which every person can learn to apply. It should be the rule to learn so to adapt the clothing that the body is never cold and never hot while under the clothes. The first rule is usually followed, and need not be dwelt on; the last is too commonly broken. It is a practice too easily acquired to sleep under so much clothing that the body becomes excessively heated, feverishly hugged. This condition gives rise to exhaustion, to disturbing dreams, to headache, to dyspepsia, and to constipation. It is so injurious that it is better to learn to sleep with even too little than with too much clothing over the body. This specially is true for the young and the vigorous. It is less true for the old; but in them it holds good in a modified degree.

The position of the bed in the bedroom is of moment. The foot of the bed to the fireplace is the best arrangement when it can be carried out. The bed should be away from the door, so that the door does not open upon it, and it should never, if it can be helped, be between the door and the fire. If the head of the bed can be placed to the east, so that the body lies in the line of the earth's motion, I think it is the best position for the sleeper.

The furniture of the bedroom, other than the bed, should be of the simplest kind. The chairs should be uncovered, and free from stuffing of woollen or other material; the wardrobe should have closely fitting doors; the closets should have closely fitting covers; and everything that can in any way gather dust should be carefully excluded.

In a word, the bedroom—the room for the third of this mortal life, and that third the most helpless—should be a sanctuary of cleanliness and order, in which no injurious [illegible] —Good Words.

THE ADDINGTON SHOW.

The annual exhibition of the Addington Agricultural Society was held on the grounds in the village of Newburgh on Saturday last. Unfortunately the weather was very unfavorable, and the show was consequently a partial failure so far as attendance is concerned. The morning was dark and lowering, and about 11 a.m. a heavy rain came down, which continued, with the exception of about an hour's cessation, until late at night, and many intending exhibitors and visitors were deterred from attending.

Considering the unfavorable circumstances, the display was very satisfactory and the exhibition would undoubtedly have been a marked success but for the rain.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

There was a good display in this line. Mr. D. H. Stickney had on exhibition a "Victor" reaper and "New Model" mower, which we have before referred to as reliable machines. They have had a large sale especially throughout Addington, and have been found to give universal satisfaction. Where strength and lightness of draft are combined are the chief requirements, these machines will always be favorites.

The Massey Manufacturing Company had one reaper on exhibition.

Mr. J. Herring had a couple of machines on the ground, but owing to the rain they were not set up.

J. Connolly & Son, of Yarker, had their superior plows on exhibition.

Has something of importance to say to the people of this section. This is the season when economical housekeepers lay in their winter supply of GROCERIES and PROVISIONS, and as it is a matter of considerable importance where these goods can be bought cheapest, the subscriber wishes to announce that he is prepared to meet such buyers on more favorable terms than can be had elsewhere in these [illegible]. His stock of

The "Beautiful."

Snow fell on Sunday night, and the atmosphere has had an exceedingly wintry shiver for the past week.

Gold by the Acre.

Some of our speculative citizens are negotiating for the purchase of a gold mine which is said to be located near Croydon.

Fire.

A despatch announces that the barn and sheds of Mr. D. M. Mace, near Hydenham, were entirely consumed by fire, together with a large quantity of grain, hay and straw. The loss is heavy; only $150 insurance.

Annual Fair.

A fair for the barter and sale of live stock will be held at the village of Marlbank, on Tuesday, the 26th of October. The farmers are manifesting a lively interest in the enterprise, and a successful fair is anticipated.

Lots of boy's clothing at Sweeney's.

Down with the Dust.

The tax collector has been distributing his little tax bills this week. The usual unpleasantness of such dons is somewhat relieved by the fact that, compared with last year's, there is a marked decrease in the amount demanded.

I warrant my goods to be as good in quality as represented. F. Chinneck.

Insured.

The steamer Hastings, which was badly damaged about two weeks ago in a collision with a steam barge near Stone Mills, was insured for $6,000, which will cover the damage. Mr. Gildersleeve is having the damage fixed by a regular survey.

Well Done.

We are informed that the ladies of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene netted over $[illegible] by supplying the visitors at the County Show with dinner. They are deserving of much credit for their enterprise and zeal in the interest of the church.

What Does it Mean?

It is astonishing with what graciousness our town fathers look upon all supplicants for favors in these latter days. Many a person has been lead to the query "What does it mean?" Perhaps a benevolent spirit overcomes them as Christmas approaches.

Correction.

In the prize list of the Lennox Agricultural exhibition, published last week, we stated that the judges awarded a first prize to both P. Slaven & Co. and Hinch & Scott, on "general display of millinery." It should have read "general display of dry goods."

Business is booming and the reason is [illegible] cheap. F. Chinneck.

Counterfeiting.

A despatch from Mill Point says that quite a number of altered one dollar Dominion bills, changed to fours, have made their appearance in this vicinity. The alteration is clumsily made, still it might deceive the uninitiated. A number of these bills have been seen about Napanee. Look out for them.

The Essence of Meanness.

On Saturday evening last some contemptible sneak, who has no fear of the law, entered the residence of Policeman Storms, on Bridge street, and stole a valuable canary. The bird was in a cage in the hall, and was seen just dusk, only a few minutes before it was missed. We should like to see Mr Storms have an opportunity of jerking the socks off the fellow that took it.

Choir Concert.

The choir of the C. M. Church, Newburgh, announce a grand concert to come off in Bartlett's Hall, in that village, on the evening of the 29th inst. The programme has been issued, and we notice among those who will take part, the names of several parties from Kingston and Napanee, besides a host of local talent. An entertainment of rare excellence is guaranteed. Admission 25 cents. A general invitation is given.

Successful Concert.

A very successful concert was given in the Orange Hall, Newburgh, on Saturday evening last. Although the rain fell in torrents, the hall was packed to the door, and the handsome sum of $60 was realized. The programme was pronounced excellent by those who attended. Rev. Mr. Elliott is an enterprising and energetic young man, and under his management the church in Newburgh is flourishing very satisfactorily. The new edifice is rapidly approaching completion.

Every body astonished at the very large stock of ready-made clothing at Sweeney's.

Anniversary and Tea.

The anniversary services of the M. E. Church, Napanee, will be held on Sabbath next (to-morrow.) Rev. F. M. Finn, of Trenton, will preach, both morning and evening. On Monday evening the anniversary tea-meeting will be given. The ladies of the church will supply the edibles in the usual plentiful and tempting manner, and the intellectual part of the programme will also be exceedingly interesting as an able deputation of speakers have promised to be present. Admission to tea—single ticket, 40 cents; two tickets, 75 cents, or three for $1.

Odd-Fellows' Anniversary.

The members of Argyle Lodge, No. 212 I. O. O. F., have decided to celebrate their anniversary by a grand concert in the town hall, on Thursday evening, November 4th. The lodge has generously offered to donate the entire proceeds of the entertainment to the band which has lately been organized in the town, and as the object is a laudable one and an excellent programme is promised, the enterprise will undoubtedly be extensively patronized. The committee is in communication with some celebrities for the occasion. The tickets have been placed at the popular figure of 25 cents to all parts of the hall; seats may be secured in advance at Henry & Bro.'s bookstore.

Smothered in a Sand Pit.

Particulars of a sad accident, which occurred near Sharp's Corners, about two miles north of Selby, on Saturday last, have reached us. Mr. Peter Bowen, of the sixth concession of Richmond, was engaged with others in getting out sand from a pit some five feet deep, when the ground suddenly caved in, burying him from the feet to the surface. His son, a small lad, was near the spot, and immediately gave the alarm, but before he could be rescued, Bowen [illegible] suffocation had ensued. The London Tea House is the place to get cheap goods. R. A. Wees.

The Osbornes.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Osborne, with their dramatic company, appeared in Napanee on Monday and Tuesday evenings. As they had no scenery or stage appliances, it cannot be said they made a hit. Mrs. Osborne is an excellent delineator of Irish character, but she is the whole show, her support being execrable.

Ross & Symonds, in the Rennie corner store, have a splendid stock of children's clothing, suitable for children from four years old. These goods far surpass anything shown before in this line, both in style and quality, and at a price to suit all, from $2.75 per suit, about the price of the cloth and trimmings.

Exporting Hay.

Parties employed by American speculators have been scouring this part of the country, buying up all the hay to be had, which is pressed and shipped to United States markets. Not only in this part, but all along the line from Prescott to Toronto, the parties are operating. Owing to this large export this commodity will probably be scarce during the coming winter.

In Operation.

Mr. Wm. Ewart has his morocco factory in operation, and it is one of the most convenient factories of the kind we have ever visited. He will pay the highest price in cash for hides, sheep and calf skins. He keeps on hand lining leather in all colors, and an inspection of his stock will convince any person that it is of superior manufacture; also saddler's skins and glove and string leather. He wishes to get a quantity of tan bark at once. See his adv.

The cheapest place for silver ware in Napanee is at Chinneck's jewelry store.

Successful Operation.

Mr Joseph Gonsoius, of South Fredericksburgh, near Hamburgh, has been a sufferer for a number of years from a diseased foot. About twenty years ago he had his limb injured in a threshing machine, from which it never recovered. He has consulted the most skilful physicians of the country in vain, and at last decided to have the leg amputated. The operation was successfully performed on Monday last by Drs. Ross, of Odessa, and Kennedy, of Bath, and the patient is now recovering nicely. It is expected that Mr. G. will be much better for the loss of his troublesome member.

Just received, direct importations $1,200 in stoneware china, and glassware, which will be sold cheap. R. A. Wees

Presentation.

A very pleasant occurrence took place on Wednesday evening, at the close of the regular weekly prayer meeting in the Presbyterian church. The members of the church had formed a purse amounting to $43 made up of voluntary subscriptions from the congregation, and D. H. Preston, Esq., presented it to the pastor, Rev. A. Young, as a mark of the high esteem in which he is held by his parishioners, and their appreciation of his arduous services in behalf of the church and its interests. The presentation was all the more acceptable for its being a complete surprise to the recipient. This is only one of many similar favors bestowed on the rev. gentleman during his residence in this charge.

Head quarters for clothing, Sweeney's.

Presbyterian Tea.

The annual tea meeting in the Presbyterian church will take place on Tuesday evening next. The arrangements are now about completed and the entertainment promises to be one of the most successful ever held in this church. An able deputation of speakers have accepted invitations to be present and deliver addresses, amongst whom are Rev. W. Hansford, of the C. M. Church; Rev. S. Card, of the M. E. Church; Rev. D. Mitchell, of Belleville, and Rev. W. Coulthard, of Picton. Dr. Smith, of Kingston, and others, are also expected. With this array of eminent clerical gentlemen, the intellectual part of the entertainment is fully assured. Excellent music will be provided by the choir. It is almost unnecessary to add that the ladies of the congregation will provide sumptuously for the refreshment of the inner man—they are noted for the excellence of the repasts served on such occasions. Doors open at 7 P. M., tea will be served about 8 P. M. A general invitation is extended to all to attend.

We have just received a new stock of hats and caps, gloves, mitts, ties and scarfs, underclothing, etc., new styles, good goods, and low prices. Ross & Symonds.

Real Estate Notes.

A. T. Harshaw, Esq., has purchased what is known as the Perry Block, paying the sum of $13,000, which is admitted by all to be a great bargain. It is the finest business property in Napanee, containing three large and commodious stores, a number of convenient offices, and two society halls. Since Mr. Harshaw came to Napanee, he has taken a permanent interest in the welfare and progress of the place, this being the second block he has purchased in the heart of the business portion of the town, and he is now the owner of business property valued at $42,000. A few more such men is just what the town requires to ensure its future prosperity.

On Wednesday the Anderson farm, near the village of Marysville, was sold at public auction and knocked down to Mr. Bernard McGuiness, of Brantford, for $12,000, it being understood that he pays $9,000 cash. Mr. McGuiness was brought up in the township of Tyendinaga, near the boundary, and left home only a few years ago with his hands as capital. He has prospered since and is now owner of one of the finest properties in this section.

Mr John Denven, of Ernesttown, has purchased the stone house and lot opposite the Wyatt hotel, in the village of Odessa, from Mr Daniel Lee, for the sum of $900 cash. Mr Lee purposes emigrating to Dakota.

H. M. Deroche, Esq., M. P. P., has purchased the residence of J. C. Huffman, Esq., East street, for which he pays the sum of $4,500. This is one of the finest private residences in Napanee.

Improvements.

Mr. C. D. Chambers has had the whole front torn out of his block on Dundas street, and is giving the place a thorough overhauling. It is his intention to enlarge the building and make it a first-class [illegible] stand.

Mr. Sam. McLaughlin is also improving his store. By tearing out a partition, he has nearly doubled the size of the shop, and he is about to remove his family to another residence, and devote the whole of the premises to his business. This step was rendered necessary by his constantly increasing trade.

Mr. John Carter has commenced operations for a new double tenement on John street, south. The building will be 40 x 50, two stories high, and will make a comfortable residence.

Mr. Ross Pringle is extending his blacksmith shop twelve feet in the rear. His constantly increasing business rendered an enlargement of his premises necessary.

Mr. Peter Rogers's residence [illegible] on Bridge street has been [illegible] and is being painted [illegible] with a large staff of [illegible]. It will add greatly to the appearance of that part of the town.

FALL CIRCULAR FROM P. SLAVEN & CO.

TO THE PEOPLE

—OF—

Napanee, Ernesttown, Fredericksburgh, Adolphustown, Richmond, Camden, Sheffield, and adjoining Counties.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.

AS THE SEASON of the year is now at hand when each and all of you will require a new supply of Dry Goods, we beg leave to inform you that we are still to be found at the old stand in the Rennie Block, with the largest and finest stock of goods in this county.

This is loud talk, but we can easily prove our assertion by the fact that we received four first prizes on our stock at the county fair last week as follows:

We received first prize for the best case of millinery.
We received first prize for the best Clothing.
We received first prize for the best Canadian Tweeds, and
First Prize for the best general display of Dry Goods,

And as our stock is known throughout the length and breadth of these counties as the

Cheap Dry Goods Store

we think that every reasonable man and woman should be satisfied that Slaven's is the place to buy your Dry Goods and Clothing, and don't you forget it.

The great advantage that we have to offer to customers, are first that our goods are all new and fresh, imported this season from the manufacturers. We do not believe in buying old bankrupt stocks at 80 or 90 cents on the dollar for the sake of getting twelve months' credit when we have the cash to buy new goods and get just what customers want. The second is that we do a strictly cash business. No goods are allowed to go out of the stock until they are paid for. We have, therefore no book-keeper to pay, nor no bad debts to lose. We are not obliged to lose any time in writing dunning letters, attending division court, etc., etc. We can give all our time and attention to buying and selling goods, and attending to the wants of customers, and it stands to reason that we can sell goods fully 10 per cent cheaper than merchants who sell goods on credit to every one that will buy, for the sake of doing a large business.

Another advantage is that during an active business career of over twenty-two years, spent in the Dry Goods business, buying and selling, importing and exporting, wholesale and retail, we have acquired a thorough and practical knowledge of the business in its details, that gives us a great advantage over men who have merely engaged in the business as a speculation, or for the novelty of the thing.

Another great advantage is that when a man brings his wife and family into our store to trade, we can supply them with everything in the Dry Goods line, for instance: He can go into the Clothing Department and pick out a suit of clothes, or, if there are none that he likes, he can select the cloth and get them made to order; or, if he has anyone at home that can make them, we will sell him the cloth cheap and while at the same time his wife and daughters can go into the Millinery Department and select Hats or Bonnets at any price, from $1 each up to $10 or $15. From there they can go into the Mantle Department and suit themselves with Mantles or Shawls at any price they want, and from there into the Dress Goods Department, where they can buy a dress at any price they choose, from a six cent Winsey up to a Gros de Lyons or Brocaded Silk worth four dollars a yard.

Cut them out Free of Charge,

From there they can go into the Flannel Department and the Hosiery Department, and so on all through the house.

These are advantages that cannot be offered by any other house in the trade, and we hope that everyone coming to town to buy Dry Goods will avail themselves of what we offer.

"I have tried," said Mrs. Hurst, very low, "because I feared you would be unhappy. I have tried to stifle my own thoughts whenever they touched this—you would not always. Sometimes they were too strong for me, when I felt you need not touch, and would be always with me; and when I felt his love and care—such care as from a husband I was never to meet."

"Hush, mother! Do not say it. It is natural, but don't say it. Yes, his love is well worth winning, dear. A blessing indeed."

"Theo," the mother whispered, humbly, "he has told me that it was your love for me which made him first think—think differently of me from—"

"From any one else? I know, dear, and he has often told you of it—oh, I guessed. That's his knock. Now I'm going for my game with the children. Kiss me, dearest. In half an hour there will be no one so happy in Little Darben as—Did you think I was going to say as you? Nonsense! As Lewis Sterne. Oh dear, he ought to have been Laurence, oughtn't he? Why do you look at me so? I feel as glad as can be, my mother. Now for our game of Hot Boiled Beans!"

CHAPTER VII.

TO BRIGHTON.

Two more years have sped in Little Darben, and once more it is a September day. At the lawn gate of the pretty ivy covered rectory the rector stands, and the baby boy upon his shoulder clutches, with tiny gentle fingers, the thick curly hair which has grown no grayer and no thinner through these two bright happy years.

"Now watch for mother," whispers Mr. Sterne, looking up into the child's face with a depth of tenderness which the little one can not understand; and just then Theo comes down the garden, the two little girls with her. She is more beautiful at twenty-one than she was in her girlhood, the rose tint still more lovely in her dark small face; the light still more lustrous in her large dusky eyes, her teeth shining white as snow in the swift brilliant smile that is less rare than now.

"Run in, May," she says, with the old childish excitement, "and ask James to ..."

"How bright you look, dear; not a bit as if this stranger had kept us up to unseasonable hours. Well, a change does all young people good, and but for the parting I shall be delighted to feel you are in Brighton this autumn."

Mr. Durham did not travel on to Edinburgh next day, though no one quite understood why. He chose to idle it away in Little Darben, in such a manner that by the morning after, when he really went northward, he established a secure friendship with the rector's household. With the rector himself, who as much enjoyed chatting over Oxford days with a man whose opinions were fresh and thoughtful, and whose nature was deeper than his own. With Mrs. Sterne, to whom, while always courteous and attentive, he gave pleasant descriptions of the life her daughter would lead in Brighton; heard of Miss Sullivan's longing for her company, and with perfect gravity, though frank indifference, of Mrs. Bertie's whims and ways. With the little girls, who owed a holiday to him, and were happily aware of a pleasant presence in the house. With the baby boy, who found a good playfellow, though one who would not bow down to the tiny ruler; and with Theo herself, who, without wishing to understand why, felt the sunshine had never been so bright before that day; and that all her life had never held such a wonderful sunset as that evening's, when, at the rector's instigation, she took this stranger to see it from the hilly church-yard, where she had alone so often paused in its beauty; and that no summer twilight had ever been so calm and sweet as this September evening's, in the sweet, wild, wanton garden round the old rectory home. She knew this stranger did not seem to seek her, or follow her, yet she knew as a woman can know that he was always conscious of her presence, always aware when her glance fell upon him, that he heard every word of hers, and was always alive to her every want or suggestion. Next day he went northward, but the "few days" he had spoken of being away dwindled into four-and-twenty hours, and in the afternoon of the following day he returned ...

... not even mentioning Rex and me.

"Or Hardy," added Theo, gravely.

"And that reminds me, Theo, I never asked you how you like Mr. Durham. Of course you do very much. I never really feared you would not, though I was anxious."

"Anxious," echoed Theo, absently, as she stood opposite her cousin, her hands linked before her. "Why?"

"Because I like him so very much; and he—"

"Yes, Angel? And he?"

"And he likes me."

"Who would not? But do you mean—"

"Don't ask me," cried Angel, throwing her arms suddenly around her cousin's neck, and hiding her face against Theo's, "but I hope so. I think so. Aunt Bertie thinks so; Hardy is certain so; and I—oh, Theo, is it unwomanly of me before he speaks? But—if it is not so, I think—I think my heart will break."

"No," said Theo, softly, and folded her arms for one minute in a strange, strong way about her cousin; "hearts do not break so easily."

To be continued.

Lord Brackenbury.

EPILOGUE.

CHAPTER IV.

"THERE ARE THREE RICHMONDS IN THE FIELD."

"I wish we could have settled this unpleasant business without troubling you, my lord," said Mr. Blake.

Lancelot, looking pale and anxious, drew his chair to the table, and took from his pocket the letters and inclosures which he had that morning received from the firm.

"Oh, but that would have been impossible," he replied.

"Yes—having Fawcett & Clarke to deal with."

"That is what troubles me," said Lancelot. "I can not conceive why he should have gone to Fawcett & Clarke, or to any lawyer at all. Why did he not come home, or write to me, himself?"

"I don't quite understand," said Mr. Marrables. "Of whom are you speaking?"

"Of Cuthbert—of my brother. Whom else?"

Mr. Marrables and his partner exchanged looks of profound astonishment.

"But—but, my dear friend," said the ...

... "Then, Marrables, you refuse to accept my positive testimony—the testimony of my own eyes?"

"I think your mind is predisposed to receive a certain impression, and that you were in both instances mistaken. However, be this as it may, the present question is now to deal with Richmond the Third."

Then they discussed this question of dealing with Richmond the Third, and with Richmond the Third's legal advisers. Fawcett & Clarke's letters mentioned certain proofs of identity which had been long ... in their hands. To examine these proofs, and to obtain a personal interview with their client, were obviously the first steps which must be taken. Upon these points Lancelot and his lawyers were agreed. It was accordingly settled that Messrs. Marrables & Blake should write to Messrs. Fawcett & Clarke, expressing Lord Brackenbury's willingness to meet their client, and examine the proofs of identity at such time and in such place as might best suit that gentleman's convenience.

Then Lancelot rose to go, but stopped half way to the door, and pulled a letter from his pocket.

"Look here," he said, "I had forgotten to show you this. It is from my friend Cochrane. Tell me what you think of it."

Mr. Marrables received it with the deference due to a letter written by the Conservative representative of the borough of Singleton; but his face was grave when he laid it down.

"It is a base plot," he said. "A base and deep-laid plot; and they mean fighting."

"But these paragraphs from the Towers and the Court Herald?"

"Written in Fawcett & Clarke's office."

"Good heavens!—why? If it be true—if it be only true—he has but to come to me, to put out his hand, and all I have is his! Seventy-five thousand pounds! What are seventy-five thousand pounds compared with what I owe him? You know how little I have spent of his money, Marrables; you know how it has accumulated, and to what an enormous total it has mounted during these seventeen years. It is all his. The estates are his; the title is his. He has but to claim them."

"And he would come to you—he would put out his hand, if it were he. Remember the affection that subsisted between your brother and yourself—"

"I do remember it—that is what puts me ..."
